

Call for Honors and Awards of the Association

Jack L. Bangs Award

Awarded to speech-language pathologists and/or audiologists who have been members of TSHA for 10 or more years, contributed significantly to TSHA and ASHA, and demonstrated outstanding leadership and exemplary professional excellence.

Hall of Fame Award

Awarded to individuals or groups of professionals who have demonstrated exemplary commitment and contribution in serving those with communication disorders. Eligible activities or achievements for which the award will be given include, but are not limited to: the advancement of knowledge and the provision of exemplary services through clinical achievements, research study, teaching, supervision, or administration; program development that promotes clinical achievement through an innovative and replicable design; extraordinary service and exemplary contributions to TSHA for 10 or more years; and lifetime achievements in the fields of speech-language pathology or audiology that have promoted excellence in clinical service. An individual nominee must be a speech-language pathologist or audiologist and a TSHA member. Interdisciplinary teams who are nominated as groups should include a speech-language pathologist and/or audiologist and one or more TSHA members. Commitment to the delivery of services must be evidenced by a specific activity or achievement of a series of related, integrated activities resulting in the achievement of a common goal.

Award of Honors

Awarded to speech-language pathologists and/or audiologists who have been members of TSHA for 10 or more years, contributed significantly to TSHA, and demonstrated outstanding leadership and exemplary professional excellence.

Public Service Award
